In response:

Observation of bradycardia in a patient with pericarditis is certainly valid. Although sustained arrhythmias are uncommon in acute pericarditis, it has been documented that epicardial and pericardial disease, such as tumors and pericarditis, may affect the SA nodal function by token of the proximity of the SA node to these structures.

Maciej Nowakowski, MD
Dariusz Listopadzki, MD
Kimball County Hospital, Kimball, NE

References